In response to a congressional request, GAO addressed several issues surrounding the Department of Justices authority to identify and label foreign films as propaganda. Justices authority for these actions is derived from the enforcement powers it receives under the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 and its amendments. Under the act, political propaganda includes written and visual communications intended to influence public opinion regarding the U. S. Governments foreign or domestic policies. The act requires that such material distributed by a registered foreign agent be labeled and a dissemination report filed, and Justice regulations require that foreign agents provide it with lists of organizations that have shown the films. GAO noted that determinations regarding a films content are made by paralegals and attorneys and that estimated costs represent about 5 to 10 percent of the units expenditures. From 1980 through 1982, the unit reviewed 27 films and labeled 11 as propaganda. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
